There's still plenty of funk and groove, but plenty of extra atmosphere as well, often courtesy of Skerik's excellent analog synth touches (he's great on sax as well).. They were also both recorded 'live with no overdubs' [2] Whereas All Kooked Out! was rehearsed, 'straight-toned' and promoted as the initial release, Mysteryfunk was mostly improvised with electronically effected instruments and as Moore has stated had 'all the freaky stuff.. For this one, Stanton Moore (drums), Skerik (sax, keys), and Charlie Hunter (eight-string guitar) have added percussionist Mike Dillon, and their sound has evolved to somewhere between those first sessions together (All Kooked Out!, Mysteryfunk).

Both albums were produced by Dan Prothero on his independent Fog City Records label.. ' Listeners also get a chance to hear him hit the distortion and rock out (while still throwing down basslines!), as on 'A-Frame' and 'Delta Skelta.. The first Garage a Trois EP (Mysteryfunk) came out of sessions for Stanton Moore's first album, All Kooked Out! While All Kooked Out! was funky and swinging, the Garage a Trois release was all improvised, moodier, and had a darker, dub-like feel.. It formed during the 1998 recording of Stanton Moore's debut All Kooked Out!, a session that also yielded Garage A Trois' debut recording Mysteryfunk. e828bfe731 Arslogix 5 Activation Move
